Re: Grant 26II44 funded by Rally Foundation for Childhood Cancer Research

In 2005 a 17-year-old boy named William was fighting a brain tumor for the second time in two years. A simple and impassioned request was made from one mom to another, “What can I do to help?” To which William’s mom replied, “raise money for childhood cancer research, and fund the best research wherever it may be.” Rally Foundation for Childhood Cancer Research’s mission was born that day, and in the 20 years since our founding, Rally has awarded $47.5 million in research grants to 781 cutting-edge projects in the United States and around the world.

Rally is proud to support Dr. Wang’s efforts in childhood cancer research.
